LIFE'S LINES

Life's Lines, as the title suggests, seeks to explore and isolate those lines that are part of everyday urban life, details that are right before our eyes but that we fail to see or have never really noticed.

Through a process of abstraction, I aimed to create photographs that reflect reality while transforming it into an ideal, narrowing the frame to an essential -and existential- composition in which space is filled with primary forms and colors.

Buildings, streets, cars, and walls are portrayed, resulting in images that evoke the simple, playful, and imaginative vision of childhood. Just like in children's games, these photographs can be mixed and combined, forming pieces of a puzzle, the puzzle of life.
